THE BENJAMIN FRANKLIN AWARD FOR PUBLIC SERVICE

The Foreign Policy Research Institute has always sought to bring the best of scholarship to bear on foreign policy problems. Furthermore, a crucial part of the Institute's program stresses the importance of public service on behalf of the nation. These two elements are also symbolized by the career of Benjamin Franklin, who devoted himself from an early age to public service and the resolution of problems through objective analysis that draws upon the best knowledge available. Franklin's international career culminated in his role as a diplomat whose work proved crucial in securing American independence.

On the occasion of FPRI's 50th anniversary and on the eve of the 300th birthday of Benjamin Franklin, we are pleased to inaugurate the First Annual Benjamin Franklin Award for Public Service, to be awarded each year to the American whose public service best exemplifies the ideals of Benjamin Franklin and the United States. The trustees of FPRI are pleased to designate Dr. Henry A. Kissinger as the first honoree.

HENRY A. KISSINGER

Henry A. Kissinger was the 56th Secretary of State of the United States from 1973 to 1977, continuing to hold the position of Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs, which he first assumed in 1969, until 1975. After leaving government service, he founded Kissinger Associates, an international consulting firm, of which he is chairman.

Dr. Kissinger was born in Fuerth, Germany, on May 27, 1923, came to the United States in 1938, and was naturalized a United States citizen on June 19, 1943. From 1943 to 1946 Dr. Kissinger served in the U.S. Army Counter Intelligence Corps and from 1946 to 1949 was a captain in the Military Intelligence Reserve. He received the B.A. Degree Summa Cum Laude at Harvard College in 1950 and the M.A. and Ph.D. Degrees at Harvard University in 1952 and 1954, respectively. From 1954 until 1971 he was a member of the Faculty of Harvard University, both in the Department of Government and at the Center for International Affairs.

Secretary Kissinger has written many books and articles on United States foreign policy, international affairs, and diplomatic history. Among the awards he has received are the Guggenheim Fellowship (1965-66), the Woodrow Wilson Prize for the best book in the fields of government, politics, and international affairs (1958), the American Institute for Public Service Award (1973), the International Platform Association Theodore Roosevelt Award (1973), the Veterans of Foreign Wars Dwight D. Eisenhower Distinguished Service Medal (1973), the Hope Award for International Understanding (1973), the Nobel Peace Prize (1973), the Presidential Medal of Freedom (1977), and the Medal of Liberty (1986).

“A nation must think before it acts.”

– ROBERT STRAUSSZ-HUPE, FOUNDER OF FPRI

MISSION – Founded in 1955, FPRI is devoted to bringing the insights of scholarship to bear on the development of policies that advance U.S. national interests. We add perspective to events by fitting them into the larger historical and cultural context of international politics.

WHO WE ARE – The scholars of FPRI include a former aide to three U.S. secretaries of state, a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian, a former president of Swarthmore College (and a Bancroft Prize-winning historian), and a former staff member of the National Security Council. We count among our trustees a former Secretary of State, a former Under Secretary of Defense, and a former Secretary of the Navy, not to mention two university presidents emeritus, a foundation president, and several active or retired corporate CEOs. And we count among our extended network of scholars – especially, our Inter-University Study Groups – representatives of diverse disciplines, including political science, history, economics, law, management, religion, sociology, and psychology.

WHAT WE DO – We conduct research on pressing issues – homeland security and the war on terrorism, developments in the Middle East, nuclear proliferation in South Asia and Northeast Asia, relations with China, Russia, and Japan – and long-term questions, such as the roles of religion and ethnicity in international politics, or the nature of Western identity and its implications for the U.S. and the Atlantic Alliance. We publish a quarterly journal, Orbis, and a series of bulletins, both of which draw on the research findings of our scholars, our Inter-University Study Groups, our conferences, and our seminars. Through our Marvin Wachman Fund for International Education and our History Institute for Teachers, we educate the public and “teach the teachers.” In this way, we serve the community and the nation, the policymakers and the educators, Wall Street and Main Street.

A VAST REACH – Each week, FPRI transmits by email a succinct analysis of some critical international issue. These bulletins are emailed to some 25,000 key people in 85 countries directly, and reach thousands more indirectly by postings on the Internet. Frequently, they are reprinted in or quoted by newspapers around the world. Our scholars are also invited to testify on Capitol Hill, comment on national radio and television, and consult informally with U.S. government officials.
