Founded in 1955, FPRI is dedicated to bringing the insights of scholarship to bear on the development of policies that advance U.S. national interests abroad. We add perspective to events by fitting them into longer-range patterns. And we develop alternative policies to deal with pressing problems. FPRI works in three areas: research, publication, and education.

WHO WE ARE – The scholars of FPRI include a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian, a former president of Swarthmore College (and a Bancroft Prize-winning historian), and a former staff member of the National Security Council. We count among our trustees a former Under Secretary of Defense, a former Secretary of the Navy, a foundation president, and several active or retired corporate CEOs. And we count among our extended network of scholars representatives of diverse disciplines, including political science, history, economics, law, management, religion, sociology, and psychiatry.

WHAT WE DO – We conduct research on pressing issues – homeland security and the war on terrorism, developments in the Middle East, nuclear proliferation in South Asia and Northeast Asia, relations with China, Russia, and Japan – and long-term questions, such as the roles of religion and ethnicity in international politics, or the nature of Western identity and its implications for the U.S. and the Atlantic Alliance. We publish a quarterly journal, Orbis, and a series of bulletins, both of which draw on the research findings of our scholars, our Inter-University Study Groups, our conferences, and our seminars. Through our Wachman Center and its History Institute for Teachers, we educate the public and offer programs for both teachers and students to help our youth understand and cherish the values, principles, and ideals on which our nation was founded. In this way, we serve the community and the nation, the policymakers and the educators, Wall Street and Main Street.

A VAST REACH – Each week, FPRI transmits by email a succinct analysis of some critical international issue. These bulletins are emailed to some 35,000 key people in 85 countries directly, and reach thousands more indirectly by postings on the Internet. Frequently, they are reprinted in – or quoted by – newspapers around the world. Our scholars are also invited to testify on Capitol Hill, comment on national radio and television, and consult informally with U.S. government officials.
