HONORING SAMUEL J. SAVITZ

Samuel J. Savitz, founder and chairman of The Savitz Organization, is one of Philadelphia's leading citizens and a major contributor to the City's cultural development, as demonstrated by his membership on the boards of such institutions as the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, the Mann Center for the Performing Arts, the Kimmel Center for the Performing Arts, the Philly Pops, the National Liberty Museum, the National Museum of American Jewish History and, of course, the Foreign Policy Research Institute. He serves on FPRI's Executive Committee and chairs the Nomination/Development Committee. Sam has also served his industry as a past president of the American Society of Pension Actuaries and a member of its board. He served in the Army Reserves as a member of the 429th Civil Affairs/Military Government unit.

FEATURING A KEYNOTE BY KENNETH POLLACK

Kenneth Pollack served on the staff of the National Security Council as Director for Persian Gulf Affairs (1999-2001) and Director for Near East and South Asian Affairs (1995-96), and as the CIA's Iraq-Iran military analyst (1988-95). He is now Director of Research for the Saban Center for Middle Eastern Studies at the Brookings Institution and a regular presence on the national broadcast media. His books include The Threatening Storm (Random House, 2002) and Arabs at War: Military Effectiveness, 1948-1991 (University of Nebraska Press, 2002). He received his Ph.D. from MIT.

A Special Note

By special arrangement, Rittenhouse Fine Art will display the artwork of the late Ethel Lunenfeld during the FPRI Annual Dinner in the Washington Room, adjacent to the ballroom of the Four Seasons Hotel. The late Ethel Lunenfeld (1918-1998) served as the Official Artist for the Robin Hood Dell and The Mann Music Center from 1978 to 1986. The works featured this evening represent some of her many drawings inspired by The Philadelphia Orchestra. Rittenhouse Fine Art (www.rittenhousefineart.com) will donate ten percent of sales proceeds to FPRI. Rittenhouse Fine Art regularly provides the FPRI offices with artworks on loan. Currently featured are several works by artist David Hewson who works in an "old master" style.

2003 Best Local Think Tank

In August 2003, the Foreign Policy Research Institute was very proud to be designated by Philadelphia Magazine as the “Best Local Think Tank.”

FPRI at a Glance

In each of our projects, we strive to address a vital issue of the day and do so in a way that speaks to multiple audiences. The research produced by the scholars takes the form of books and articles in professional journals that help shape the intellectual climate in which foreign policy is made. This work is also condensed into a form that, by electronic means, reaches a much larger group. We are thus able to reach a wide spectrum that includes policymakers and policy analysts, scholars, educators, the media, and interested citizens

– Harvey Sicherman, President, FPRI (Ph.D. in International Relations, University of Pennsylvania)

Center on Terrorism, Counter-Terrorism, and Homeland Security

Chaired by Stephen Gale (Ph.D. in Geography, University of Michigan) and Michael Radu (Ph.D. in International Relations, Columbia University).

Center for the Study of America and the West

Directed by Alan H. Luxenberg (M.A. in Diplomatic History, Temple University)

MISSION

Founded in 1955, FPRI is devoted to bringing the insights of scholarship to bear on the development of policies that advance U.S. national interests. We add perspective to events by fitting them into the larger historical and cultural context of international politics.

WHO WE ARE

The scholars of FPRI include a former aide to three U.S. secretaries of state, a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian, a former president of Swarthmore College (and a Bancroft Prize-winning historian), and two former staff members of the National Security Council. We count among our trustees a former Secretary of State and a former Secretary of the Navy (and among our former trustees and interns two current Undersecretaries of Defense), not to mention two university presidents emeritus, a foundation president, and several active or retired corporate CEOs. And we count among our extended network of scholars – especially, our Inter-University Study Groups – representatives of diverse disciplines, including political science, history, economics, law, management, religion, sociology, and psychology.

WHAT WE DO

We conduct research on pressing issues – homeland security and the war on terrorism, developments in the Middle East, nuclear proliferation in South Asia and Northeast Asia, relations with China, Russia, and Japan – and long-term questions, such as the roles of religion and ethnicity in international politics, or the nature of Western identity and its implications for the U.S. and the Atlantic Alliance. We publish a quarterly journal, Orbis, and a series of bulletins, both of which draw on the research findings of our scholars, our Inter-University Study Groups, our conferences, and our seminars. Through our Marvin Wachman Fund for International Education and our History Academy, we educate the public and “teach the teachers.” In this way, we serve the community and the nation, the policymakers and the educators, Wall Street and Main Street.

A VAST REACH

Each week, FPRI transmits by email a succinct analysis of some critical international issue. These bulletins are emailed to some 25,000 key people in 85 countries directly, and reach thousands more indirectly by postings on the Internet. Frequently, they are reprinted in or quoted by newspapers around the world. Our scholars are also invited to testify on Capitol Hill, comment on national radio and television, and consult informally with U.S. government officials.
